There are two traditional languages of the Torres Strait Islands, Meriam Mir and Kalau Lagau Ya.

Meriam Mir is the language of the Eastern Islands of Mer (Murray), Erub (Darnley), Waier, Daur and Ugar (Stephen). Kalau Lagau Ya has four distinct dialects derived from this language which are:

- Kalau Kawau Ya - the dialect of the top Western Islands group of Saibai, Dauan (Mt Cornwallis) and Boigu including Bamaga and Seisia.
- Kalau Lagau Ya - the dialect of the Central Western Islands of Mabuiag (Jervis) and Badu (Mulgrave). This dialect is also known as Gumulgau Ya.
- Kulkalgau Ya - the dialect of the Central Islands of Aurid (Aureed), Damut (Dalrymple), Iama (Yam or Turtle-Backed), Masig (Yorke), Mauar (Rennel), Naghir (Mt Earnest), Poruma (Coconut) and Warraber (Sue).
- Kawalgau Ya - the dialect of the South Western Islands of Muralag (Prince of Wales, Nurupai (Horn), Giralag (Friday), Waiben (Thursday Island), Keriri (Hammond), Maurura (Wednesday), Moa (Banks). It is also known as Kaurareg.

The dialects are determined geographically that developed over period of time influenced through traditional trade, visits, inter-marriages, and kinship ties and most recently in the last century, due to the marine industry and missionary arrivals, gave birth to another language the Torres Strait Creole also called Ailam Tok or Umpla Tok spoken by all.

Torres Strait Creole

Creole is a language that developed from pidgin English of the southwest Pacific and spread around the Torres Strait Islands during the twentieth century. It has its own distinctive sound system, grammar, vocabulary, usage and meaning. Creole became a language by about 1910, among the St Paul's mission children. There are several factors encouraging its adoption; its convenience in helping speakers of the Western (Kalau Lagau Ya) and Eastern (Miriam Mir) Strait languages communicate with each other, the workforce of the Strait pearlimg and beche-de-mer industries, and the employment of Pacific Islanders as mission teachers.
